
ing, Mr. Barger made an important statement relative to the fifteen regiments of the Pennsylvania Reserves. He stated that they entered the service of Pennsylvania May three years ago, but were not mustered into the service until two months afterwards. They were now greatly dissatisfied; so much so, that many of them were under arrest; the men claiming that the time of service expired in May, and the National Government contending it extended until July. Mr. Barger read extracts of a letter from Colonel McCandless, commanding the division, relative to the dissatisfaction, and fearing that the men would refuse to serve after May. Governor Curtin had charged some action on the part of the Legisla-ure to induce the Government to comply with the demand of the Reserves. In accordance with this, Mr. Barger offered a resolution urgently soliciting the President to discharge the Reserves. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat, located at Yellville, Ark., says:

Nearly every one is going out who can get away; and many of those who recently renewed their allegiance to the Government, complain bitterly because Uncle Sam don't furnish transportation for enough to remove their families out of the country their damnable treason has desolated. Very few are mak-

Many families are in the most wretched condition, living in buildings formerly used for horse stables, and drawing a scanty subsistence from the Government. The commanding officer here, Major Murphy, Sixth regiment, M. S. M., has done all that he felt authorized to do to induce families to remain on and cultivate their farms; but his entreaties and promises avail little. They have been robbed and harassed till their own homes and country have become loathsome to them.
